About half-past 7 o'clock in the evening, Sam Turner walked into Frank's saloon, and soon after entering noticed a difficulty between a man by the name of Crow and one C. E. Reeves. After a few exciting words the two parties came to blows, and Turner among others, in-terfered to separate them. He caught hold of Reeves and tried to prevent him from fighting, but Reeves pulled him outside the door, and immediately on releasing him, pulled out a pistol and commenced firing. Two shots were fired by Reeves, when Turner drew his pistol and fired one shot, the ball strik-ing Reeves in the right thigh and ranging downward. The ball, after passing through the thigh lodged in the left knee producing a painful, but not dan-gerous wound. The principal dinjury, however, was received by a stone mason named Jasper J. Goff, who, at the time, was endeavoring to escape from the vicinity of the shooting, but was struck by a stray shot supposed to have been fired from Reeves' pistol. Walter E. fired from Reeves pistol. Walter E. Price, better known in this town as "Kansas," was also struck in the left knee, the leg being quite badly shatter-ed. Goff was shot in the small of the back, about two inches to the left of the spinal column. Dr. Connolly, who was called in, attempted to probe the wound, but was unable to find the ball. It is supposed that it has entered the abdomen. He is suffering great pain, and his wound is considered mortal. Turner was arrested and lodged in jail. We are unable to say at present to whom the blame is to be laid of shooting innocent parties in the public streets, but the matter will be fully investigated tomorrow by the proper court. Reeves is also under arrest, but in order to have proper treatment of his wounds was permitted to remain last night at the International Hotel.

The first to report the proceedings of Congress in short-hand was Thos. Lloyd, an Englishman, who served with distinction in the army of the Revolution. In 1819 he invented a system of stenogra-phy, by the aid of which he was able to take down speeches for subsequent trans-
